
CONTRIBUTORS

CARLISLE ADAMS

Carlisle Adams is a Full Professor in the School of Information Technology and Engineering (SITE) at the University of Ottawa. In both his private sector and his academic work, he has focused on the standardization of cryptology and security technologies for the Internet, and his technical contributions include encryption algorithms, security authentication protocols, and a comprehensive architecture and policy language for access control in electronic environments. He can be reached at cadams@site.uottawa.ca.

JANE BAILEY

Jane Bailey is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Law, University of Ottawa. Her ongoing research focuses on the impact of evolving technology on significant public commitments to equality rights, freedom of expression, and multiculturalism, as well as the societal and cultural impact of the Internet and emerging forms of private technological control, particularly in relation to members of socially disadvantaged communities. She can be reached at jane.bailey@uottawa.ca.

JENNIFER BARRIGAR

A doctoral candidate in the Law and Technology Program at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law, Jennifer Barrigar previously worked as legal counsel at the Office of the Privacy Commissioner in Canada. Her current privacy research builds on her interest in the creation, performance, and regulation of identities in online environments, focusing on the creation of the exclusively online “self” and its implications for privacy law and identity management technologies. She can be reached at jbarro72@uottawa.ca.

KATIE BLACK

Katie Black is an LLB Candidate at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law. Her interest in privacy rights has led her to conduct research on the human rights implications of Canada’s no-fly list, the effects of battered women’s support programs on personal identity, soft paternalism and soft surveillance in consent-gathering processes, and the impact of opening up adoption records on women’s reproductive autonomy. She can be reached at kblaco44@uottawa.ca.

JACQUELYN BURKELL

Jacquelyn Burkell is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Information and Media Studies, University of Western Ontario. Trained in psychology, she conducts empirical research on the interaction between people and technology, with a particular emphasis on the role of cognition in such interactions. Much of her work focuses on anonymity in online communication, examining how the pseudonymity offered by online communication is experienced by online communicators and how this experience changes communication behavior and interpretation. She can be reached at jburkell@uwo.ca.

ALEX CAMERON

Alex Cameron is a doctoral candidate in the Law and Technology Program at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law. He was previously an associate at the law firm of Fasken Martineau Dumoulin LLP. His current studies focus on privacy and copyright with a focus on the interplay between privacy and digital rights management. He can be reached at acameron@uottawa.ca.

ROBERT CAREY

Robert Carey is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Faculty of Information and Media Studies, the University of Western Ontario. His research at the Faculty concentrates on four different strands of anonymity-related research: conceptual and behavioral models of anonymity on the Internet; behavioral effects of anonymity in computer-mediated communication; the conceptualization of anonymity; and mass media's configuration of anonymity and information technology. He can be reached at rcarey2@uwo.ca.

JENNIFER CHANDLER

Jennifer Chandler is an Associate Professor at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law. She focuses on law, science, and technology, particularly the social and environmental effects of emerging technologies and the interaction of emerging technologies with law and regulation. She has written extensively in the areas of cybersecurity and cybertorts. She can be reached at jennifer.chandler@uottawa.ca.

JEREMY CLARK

Jeremy Clark is a doctoral candidate with the Centre for Applied Cryptographic Research (CACR) and the Cryptography, Security, and Privacy (CrySP) Group at the University of Waterloo. His research focuses on cryptographic voting, as well as privacy enhancing technologies, applied cryptography, the economics of information security, and usable security and privacy. He can be reached at j5clark@cs.uwaterloo.ca.

STEVEN DAVIS

Steven Davis is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Simon Fraser University and the former Director of the Centre on Values and Ethics at Carleton University. He researches philosophy of language and philosophy of mind, and his recent research has focused on privacy, identifying, and identification. He can be reached at davis@connect.carleton.ca.

JANE DOE

Jane Doe successfully sued the Toronto Police Force for negligence and discrimination in the investigation of her rape, a case that set legal precedent and is taught in law schools across Canada. Jane Doe is an author (The Story of Jane Doe, Random House), teacher, and community organizer. She is currently completing research on the use and efficacy of the Sexual Assault Evidence Kit (SEAK) and police practices of “warning” women regarding stranger and serial rapists.

GIUSELLA FINOCCHIARO

Giusella Finocchiaro is Professor of Internet Law and Private Law at the University of Bologna. She specializes in Internet law both at her own Finocchiaro law firm and as a consultant for other law firms. She also acts as a consultant for the European Union on Internet law issues. She can be reached at giusella.finocchiaro@unibo.it.

A. MICHAEL FROMKIN

A. Michael Froomkin is Professor of Law at the University of Miami, Faculty of Law. He is on the advisory boards of several organizations including the Electronic Freedom Foundation and BNA Electronic Information Policy and Law Report, is a member of the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London, and writes the well-known discourse.net blog. His research interests include Internet governance, privacy, and electronic democracy. He can be reached at froomkin@law.tm.

PHILIPPE GAUVIN

Philippe Gauvin completed his Master’s Degree in Law and Technology at the University of Ottawa and is currently working as counsel, regulatory affairs, for Bell Canada. His work consists of ensuring the company’s regulatory compliance with privacy, copyright, telecommunications, and broadcasting laws. He can be reached at philippe.gauvin@bell.ca.

DAPHNE GILBERT

Daphne Gilbert is an Associate Professor at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law. Her privacy research focuses on the constitutionalized protection of online expression and privacy, and she has an interest in the ethics of compelling cooperation between private organizations and law enforcement and in the expectations of user privacy online. She can be reached at dgilbert@uottawa.ca.

MARSHA HANEN

Marsha Hanen is a former president of the University of Winnipeg and an Adjunct Professor of Philosophy at the University of Victoria. She was the president of the Sheldon Chumir Foundation for Ethics in Leadership from 1999 to 2006. Throughout her career, she has had a broad and deep interest in ethics, philosophy of science, and philosophy of law. Recently she has published on patient privacy and anonymity in medical contexts. She can be reached at mhanen@chumirethicsfoundation.ca.

DANIEL C. HOWE

Daniel C. Howe is a digital artist and researcher at NYU's Media Research Lab where he is completing his PhD thesis on generative literary systems. His privacy research has led to TrackMeNot, an artware intervention addressing data profiling on the Internet, which he has worked on with Helen Nissenbaum. He can be reached at dhowe@mrl.nyu.edu.

IAN KERR

Ian Kerr holds the Canada Research Chair in Ethics, Law, and Technology at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law with cross-appointments to the Faculty of Medicine, the Department of Philosophy, and the School of Information Studies. He is also the principal investigator of the ID Trail project. Among other things, he is interested in human-machine mergers and the manner in which new and emerging technologies alter our perceptions, conceptions, and expectations of privacy. He can be reached at iankerr@uottawa.ca.

BERT-JAAP KOOPS

Bert-Jaap Koops is Professor of Regulation and Technology and the former academic director of the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology, and Society (TILT) at Tilburg University. His privacy research primarily focuses on cryptography, identity-related crime, and DNA forensics. He can be reached at e.j.koops@uvt.nl.

PHILIPPA LAWSON

Philippa Lawson is the former Director of the Canadian Internet Policy and Public Interest Clinic (CIPPIC), based at the University of Ottawa. Through her research and advocacy work, she has represented consumer interests in privacy issues before policy and law-making bodies. She can be reached at pippa@gmail.com.

RONALD LEENES

Ronald Leenes is an Associate Professor at the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology, and Society (TILT) at Tilburg University. His primary research interests are privacy and identity management, and regulation of, and by, technology. He is also involved in research in ID fraud, biometrics, and online dispute resolution. He can be reached at r.e.leenes@uvt.nl.

IAN LLOYD

Ian Lloyd is Professor of Information Technology Law at the University of Strathclyde Law School. He has researched and written extensively on data protection and has recently worked on the Data Protection Programme (DAPRO), funded by the European Union. He can be reached at i.j.lloyd@strath.ac.uk.

CAROLE LUCOCK

Carole Lucock is a doctoral candidate in the Law and Technology Program at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law, and is project manager of the ID Trail. Her research interests include the intersection of privacy, anonymity, and identity, and the potential distinctions between imposed versus assumed anonymity. She can be reached at clucock@uottawa.ca.

SHOSHANA MAGNET

Shoshana Magnet is a Postdoctoral Fellow at McGill University. She has been appointed as an Assistant Professor at the Institute of Women's Studies at the University of Ottawa, commencing in 2009. Her privacy research includes biometrics, borders, and the relationship between privacy and equality. She can be reached at shoshana.magnet@uottawa.ca.

GARY T. MARX

Gary T. Marx is Professor Emeritus of Sociology at MIT and recently held the position of Hixon-Riggs Professor of Science, Technology, and Society at Harvey Mudd College, Claremont, California. He has written extensively about surveillance, and his current research focuses on new forms of surveillance and social control across borders. He can be reached at gtmarx@mit.edu.

DAVID MATHESON

David Matheson is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Carleton University. Through his privacy-related research, he has written about privacy and knowableness, anonymity and responsible testimony, layperson authentication of contested experts, privacy and personal security, the nature of personal information, and the importance of privacy for friendship. He can be reached at david_matheson@carleton.ca.

JENA MCGILL

Jena McGill holds an LLB from the University of Ottawa Faculty of Law and an MA from the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. She is currently clerking at the Supreme Court of Canada. She has a strong interest in equality and privacy rights, particularly as they relate to gender issues on a national and international scale. She can be reached at jena.mcgill@gmail.com.

JASON MILLAR

Jason Millar is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Philosophy at Queens University. He is interested in the intersection of ethics, philosophy of technology, and philosophy of mind. His research interests also include cryptography and personal area networks in cyborg applications, particularly their impact on the concept of identity and anonymity. He can be reached at jasonxmiller@gmail.com.

XX CONTRIBUTORS

HELEN NISSENBAUM

Helen Nissenbaum is Professor of Media, Culture, and Communication at New York University and a Faculty Fellow of the Information Law Institute. She researches ethical and political issues relating to information technology and new media, with a particular emphasis on privacy, the politics of search engines, and values embodied in the design of information technologies and systems. She can be reached at helen.nissenbaum@nyu.edu.

MARY O'DONOGHUE

Mary O'Donoghue is Senior Counsel and Manager of Legal Services at the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Ontario. She is currently an executive member of the Privacy Law section of the Ontario Bar Association and her privacy research has focused on the constitutional and legal aspects of anonymity. She can be reached at mary.o'donoghue@ipc.on.ca.

DAVID J. PHILLIPS

David J. Phillips is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Information, University of Toronto. His research focuses on the political economy and social shaping of information and communication technologies, in particular surveillance and identification technologies. He can be reached at davidj.phillips@utoronto.ca.

CHARLES D. RAAB

Charles D. Raab is Professor Emeritus of Government at the School of Social and Political Studies at the University of Edinburgh. His privacy research focuses on surveillance and information policy, with an emphasis on privacy protection and public access to information. He can be reached at c.d.raab@ed.ac.uk.

VALERIE STEEVES

Valerie Steeves is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Criminology and the Faculty of Law at the University of Ottawa. Her main research focus is human rights and technology issues. She has written and spoken extensively on privacy from a human rights perspective and is an active participant in the privacy policymaking process in Canada. She can be reached at vsteeves@uottawa.ca.

ANNE UTECK

Anne Uteck is a doctoral candidate in the Law and Technology Program at the University of Ottawa, Faculty of Law. Her research is on spatial privacy and other privacy interests outside the informational context implicated by emerging surveillance technologies. Recently, she has published on the topic of radio frequency identification (RFID) and consumer privacy. She can be reached at euteco66@uottawa.ca.

SIMONE VAN DER HOF

Simone van der Hof is a Senior Research Fellow and Assistant Professor at the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology, and Society (TILT) of Tilburg University. Her main research interests are social and legal issues with respect to identity management in electronic public service delivery, regulatory issues concerning profiling technologies and personalization of public and private services, regulation of electronic authentication, electronic evidence and information security, and private (international) law aspects of electronic commerce. She can be reached at s.vdrhof@uvt.nl.